But we at any rate, I think, may claim the proud satisfaction of having contributed to the solution of the problem by that first most important step of formulating and then trying by actual application in the teaching of these subjects to work out a practical curriculum which would appeal to the man who wanted a higher training for business life. The difficulties were many, aside from the opposition of the historic or traditional departments, which after all could only prove to be temporary--the difficulty of course lay in the problem itself. To find a suitable subject matter, to make it into shape to elaborate it, to find properly trained men to present it--these were the real difficulties which made the early years of this experiment times of such strenuous and continued activity. First we had four students and four professors. Then we had fourteen students and then forty and so the number grew, slowly but solidly--that is, the idea was spreading abroad in the community, some of the students in the institution who were not satisfied with the courses they were pursuing found here what afforded them the highway to the highest training and the best results, and some students with whom other departments were not satisfied were thrown out of them and into ours as the newest...
